2015 dividend scale announced

A history of competitive performance and stable returns

Canada Life™ has offered participating life insurance for over 165 years and has distributed dividends to participating policyowners every year since 1848. Canada Life's participating life insurance products continue to be competitive and demonstrate a history of strong, stable performance.

In 2015, the dividend scale for Canada Life's open block participating life insurance policies will increase with participating policyowner dividends increasing, on average, by 2.5 per cent. This is compared to dividends that would have been received at the 2015 anniversary if there had been no change. The dividend scale interest rate will remain unchanged at 6.5 per cent.

The dividend scale will remain unchanged for all Canada Life closed block participating life insurance policies, former Crown Life participating life insurance policies and former New York Life participating insurance policies.

All participating accounts are managed and reviewed separately, and their experience will differ.

Participating life insurance policies are eligible for a periodic policyowner dividend in accordance with Canada Life's participating policyowner dividend policy. The amount available for distribution to policyowners as policyowner dividends is determined at least annually following a review of the actual and expected experience of the participating account. The dividend scale may be affected by factors such as investment returns, mortality experience, expenses, lapses and taxes.
